Celerity Mineral Corp Receives Approval for the Proposed Drill Program

Celerity Mineral Corp (“Celerity” or “company”) is pleased to announce that it has successfully obtained approval for the planned drill program for the Boulder Property, located 16 miles northeast of Butte, MT, marking a giant step forward in the company’s mission to unlock the full potential of the highly prospective Boulder Property.

The approvals of the Exploration License by the Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) and the Plan of Operations and Environment Assessment (EA) by the United States Forestry Service (USFS) represent a pivotal achievement for Celerity Mineral. This milestone opens the door to a critical phase of exploration, bringing the company one step closer in its pursuit to uncover a substantial copper discovery. "Obtaining the approval for our planned drill program is a testament to the dedication and expertise of our team. We are excited to begin the execution phase of a drill program. We believe the Boulder Property holds significant promise and are eager to unlock its potential for the benefit of our shareholders and the broader community." stated Corey Safran, President and CEO of Celerity Mineral.

As Celerity Mineral embarks on this exciting, future drilling phase of exploration, the company is advancing the substantive, current and planned, exploration projects to support the now-approved drill program, which includes several projects that are fully funded by government agencies and educational institutions:

- i. An airborne magnetic geophysical survey (Funded by the USGS Earth Mapping Resource Initiative)

- ii. A hyperspectral core analysis (Funded by the Colorado School of Mines)
 - iii. Mapping of the geological structure (Funded by Montana Tech University)
 - iv. A Quantec Titan MT (Funded by Celerity Mineral),
- are all expected to be completed in Q1 2024.
